

Title: “Peninsula Sunset”

Description: Sun setting over Otago Peninsula, Dunedin

Photographer: Trevor Douglas

Where, when: Otago Peninsula, Dunedin, May 2020.

Sustainability? We made a day trip exploring the Otago Peninsula hoping to photograph some wildlife but they were not co-operating, so as the weather was starting to close in on us, we turned around to head home. I could see that the sun was just visible through the heavy fog so managed this image.

I love the Otago Peninsula for its landscapes and its amazing wildlife. It’s often misty, very windy and dramatic. How wonderful to have such a landscape within 15 minutes drive from Dunedin city.

What does this image tell us about sustainability? Just that nature has a raw grandeur. That should keep us humans humble ... and reaching for our cameras to capture the moment.
